LENNOX AND ADDINGTON HISTORICAL SOCIETY

As there seems to be considerable misunderstanding in regard to the question of membership in the Lennox and Addington Historical Society, the officers deem it advisable to explain that the membership of the Society is in no sense a limited one. Every citizen is eligible for membership and the officers would welcome a large increase in the number of members on the list. The dues for active members are one dollar a year and for family members, one dollar and a half.

It has been the policy of the Executive to refrain from mentioning the question of dues at the regular meetings because of a fear that some of those who attend the lectures might think that only members were expected to come. Such is not the case. Everyone is welcome whether members of the society or not and though there is a certain expense in connection with the payment of the travelling expenses of those who lecture here, which must be provided for, the officers feel that the citizens understand this situation and enough have joined during the five and one half years the Society has existed to meet the requirements. The Officers would welcome new members and would be particularly pleased to have, as members, those citizens who have moved away from the County. Each member is entitled to a free copy of the annual volume which is published by the Society.

ADDITIONS TO THE COLLECTION.

The Society has been particularly fortunate in receiving additions to the Collection of Historical Material. Since the annual meeting, which was held in May, 1912, some most valuable records have been given. These gifts include:

Early School Books.
Reports and publications of other Historical Societies.

A collection of early Crown Seals.

Several military and other commissions.

Original land grants on parchment.
Copies of early Almanacs published in Kingston.

Several interesting photographs of citizens and local scenery.

Many copies of early newspapers published in this County, Hastings and Frontenac.

Copies of early Ontario newspapers.
Autograph album containing seals and signatures of prominent Canadians.

Manuscript lists of United Empire Loyalists.

List of members of the House of Assembly for Upper Canada from 1792-1841.

Bronze medal commemorating the Quebec Tercentenary Celebration of the Founding of Quebec by Champlain.

History of the Methodist Church—Europe and America.

A number of early Ontario and Canadian Directories.
Many books on Historical subjects.

The early newspapers of the are rather hard to secure particularly the issues of "The Star." This paper, although in comparatively recent times seems to be almost impossible to obtain. Copies of the Star, former, Bee, Express, Beaver tiser and of the early King Belleville papers are most gifts.

It is a great satisfaction to general public all over this take such a keen interest in of the Society. The collection is now being made will, in time to come, be most valuable. Things have been well attended officers hope to be able to the high standard of the which have been given to the up to the present time. By effort the Lennox and Addington Historical Society will one day be of the best institutions of the Canada. Every citizen of the should support it by attending meetings, by adding to the collection and, when possible, by financial support through men

A Happy New Year to All

Thanks, for Past Favors

This year's Christmas trade has broken all records. In China particularly, we have never been so rushed. This may be accounted for partly from the fact that as we are selling out this department we very materially reduced the price.

The Remainder

We will sell at half price until the whole stock is disposed of. The first to come will have the best choice, and we advise taking immediate advantage of this chance.

Again wishing all the compliments of the season, and hoping to have the privilege of serving you in the future, I am

NOTICE.

To the Electors of Napanee

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

If my actions and opinions as a Councillor during the past year meet with your approval your vote and influence towards my re-election for 1913 would be appreciated.

As time will not permit of a personal interview please accept this notice in my behalf.

Wishing all the compliments of the season, I remain

Yours truly,
E. H. CARSON.

To the Electors of Napanee

Ladies and Gentlemen,—

I have served you faithfully during the past two years at the Council Board and would solicit a continuance of your favor as Councillor for 1913.

Yours very truly,
R. J. DICKINSON.

N. C. I. COMMENCEMENT.

The Napanee Collegiate commencement exercises brought out one of the largest crowds of the season. On Thursday evening, Dec. 19th, eight hundred or more people crowded into the Brisco Opera House to witness this very interesting event.

At eight o'clock Mr. A. E. Paul, the chairman, commenced the programme with a very well-worded and original address. Following the chairman's address was the Valedictory, read by Miss Alice Preston. Owing to a severe cold Miss Marion Paul, our talented N. C. I. singer, was unable to appear,
but her place was ably filled by her sister, Miss Alice O. Paul, who rendered two very excellent solos. Directly after this came the girls' drill. To attempt to describe the beauty of this drill would be an injustice to Miss Moir, the trainer, and to the girls themselves, but the applause shows
how well it was appreciated.

The presentation of diplomas, or in other words, the rewarding of a slip of paper for years of ceaseless toil, was conducted by Mr. Flach, who gave a short but interesting address.

The most important item of the programme was the burlesque Merchant of Venice.

The characters were:

The characters in this play were well chosen. The antics and jokes of Frank Mills, as Launcelot Gobbo, kept the house in an uproar. Following the play was the great and only N. C. I. Journal, read by Miss Mabel Dunbar. This evening of entertainment closed with the Nation Anthem, by the orchestra, which played splendidly during the whole entertainment.

In the morning the pupils of the N. C. I. collected in the Assembly hall for the purpose of bidding farewell to an esteemed and loved teacher, Mr. Benson. A travelling bag as a small remembrance was given to Mr. Benson by the school.

Many persons, perfectly temperate themselves and desirous of seeing all men temperate, support the license system as the best way to bring about this desired result. These well-meaning people protest that local option would mean the liquor trade, without government supervision, because those who wanted liquor, would always get it in spite of local option and that it is much better to have the traffic under government control. That sounds very plausible but let us see what the license system of Ontario is doing to vindicate itself. A few weeks ago in a roadside inn near London, Ontario, an hotel keeper was fined $20 for selling liquor to a fourteen-year-old girl and her two boy companions, both minors, and this man still retains his license. About the same time a Polish woman was fined $100 for selling liquor without a license to some full-grown Poles. So we see that according to the Ontario system, the crime of selling liquor without a license far surpasses that of selling it to children. Nor is this one isolated case. Surely there is "something rotten in the state of Denmark," if that be the best the license law can do for us. Another objection of temperate persons to local option is that they fear it would kill any town from a business point of view. In rebuttal of this the December number of the White Ribbon Tidings publishes a long list of evidence as to the increased business prosperity of local option towns; granting as authority, the Mayor, Reeve, or President of the Board of Trade of each town. Among these towns are such places as Collingwood and Orillia. The latter place particularly has grown phenomenally since it went "dry," despite the dreary lamentations and prognostications of many of its citizens before local option was passed.

Bomb Thrown at Lord Kills Attendant

State Entry into Delhi Is an Outrage In Which Representative in India Wounded—May Be Moslem Resentment of Capital.

DELHI, India, Dec. 24.—dinge, Viceroy of India, was and an attendant of his k bomb hurled at the Viceroy's house as he was entering capital in state yesterday.

The bomb-thrower's attention Lord Hardinge came within breadth of being successful.

The motive for the attack mystery on which it will be to hazard a guess until it whether the miscreant is a Mussulman. It is not known whether the bomb-thrower arrested. Fears are expressed may have been a manife Moslem resentment at the occupancy of the ancient Mol capital of India. It is as a warning reached London ago to the effect that some would be attempted by Moh on the occasion of the state the Viceroy into Delhi.

The viceroy was making in state into Delhi, as the ceremonies in connection transfer of the capital from to Delhi. The transfer was October last, but Lord Har not to take formal possession new quarters until yesterday gathering of troops, officials jab chiefs was present, to the vice-regal party. Its splendid procession had just railway station, passing Chandul Chowk, when the thrown. It was hurled b standing on a house-top, and the howah, or basket, of the elephant, in which he and dinge were riding.

Three splinters of the bomb penetrated the back of Lord Hardinge, and also wounded in the neck screws with which the bomb and which passed through his body.

The doctors who removed splinters from the wound that it was marvellous how he escaped more serious internal injuries.

The Viceroy tried to stand reeled and fainted, and those who gathered around had no difficulty in removing him from the elephant's back. The Viceroy's carriage was assisted to alight howdah and placed in motor of which conveyed the Viceroy to hospital and another the Viceroy's official residence.

The native standing before Viceroy and Vicereine holding a large umbrella, was blown position to the ground and killed, while the driver sitting in the howdah was wounded fewer than eight places.

True British tradition that no one can be allowed to interfere with British policy in India, the occasion of the inauguration of Imperial capital was proceeding almost immediately.

Thousands of Tons of Dust.

According to the estimates of a Government expert, who has given much attention to the study of the remarkable phenomena of dust and sand storms in the arid regions of the west, every cubic mile of the lower air during an ordinary "dry storm" contains at least 225 tons of dust, while in severe storms of this kind as much as 126,000 tons of dust and sand may be contained in a cubic mile of air. Dust storms sometimes last for twenty or thirty hours.

Our Imagination.

We worry a lot over troubles that never materialize. The greater part of our woes lives in our imagination. On that we waste our strength and nerve force, leaving a rather weak prop on which to lean in real adversity. Trouble we must meet—that is inevitable—but we do not have to live it through twice, the first time in imagination. A fear of what the future contains is a clog upon our heels and prevents the achievement of many an important deed.

CHAMBERLIN INDICTED

President of G.T.R. Is Charged
in U.S. With Conspiracy.

Chairman Smithers Is Also Named In Proceedings Against G.T.R. and
New Haven Line—The Allegations
Made by Grand Jury Include
"Quiet Meetings" In Effort to Restrain Trade.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.—Attorney-General Wickersham will follow up the indictments of officials of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad and Grand Trunk Railroad with immediate consideration of the question whether civil suit should be instituted to restrain the two roads from pursuing their alleged combination in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

The men indicted are Chas. E. Mellen, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad; E. J.
Chamberlin, president of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, and Alfred Smithers, chairman of the Grand Trunk board of directors. The indictments were due largely to the oral testimony of the numerous witnesses, which the attorney-general said had developed more than he had anticipated.

The penalty for the crime charged,
which is alleged to be a violation of section 1, of the Sherman anti-trust law, is one year in jail, a fine of $5,000 or both. Mr. Mellen and Mr. Chamberlin, upon being notified of the indictment, promised the federal authorities, through their counsel, that they would appear at one o'clock this afternoon to enter their pleas.

Mr. Chamberlin is already in New York and Mr. Mellen will come from New Haven. Mr. Smithers is now in London. It is believed by the federal authorities, however, that he will sail
for this country as soon as he hears that an indictment lies against him.

"A quiet meeting" between Mellen, Chamberlin and Smithers in New York on August 5, 1912, is named in the indictments as the time and place
at which the defendants first "engaged in an unlawful combination and conspiracy to prevent the construction and completion" of the proposed extension of the Grand Trunk Railway system in New England and the operation of the Grand Trunk steamships between Providence and New York.
Two other meetings, it is alleged, were afterwards held, also in New York,
one on Sept. 20, 1912, and the other on Oct. 1, 1912, for the purpose of completing the alleged conspiracy.

Allies State Demand and Turks Will Consider.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—After several days of preliminary skirmishing in accordance with the cherished traditions of Oriental diplomacy, the Turkish delegates yesterday faced the real attack of the allies at the fifth meeting of the Peace Conference which has as an object the settling of the war between the Balkan allies and Turkey.

The victorious allies laid their most important cards on the table. These were in the form of territorial conditions which they had agreed to impose on the Ottoman Empire. The demands as set forth were:

First, the cession by Turkey of all the territory west of a line starting from a point east of Rodosto, on the Sea of Marmora, to a point in the Bay of Malatra, on the Black Sea, and excluding the peninsula of Gallipoli, Albania's status to be decided by the powers.

Second, the cession of the Aegean Islands occupied by the Greek forces in the present war and by the Italians in the recent war.

Third, the cession to Greece of all
Turkish rights in the Island of Crete.
The Turkish delegates secured an adjournment until Saturday to consider the demands. In the informal conversation with the delegates they asserted that it would be impossible for them to accept such terms, but that statement is inevitable in meetings of this character, and was expected.

The allies did not reveal yesterday
the financial proposals which they will make to Turkey, reserving them for a future meeting.

The territorial profits of the war which the allies will divide are the same as those published in the despatches Dec. 14, with the exception of the arrangement of the powers made for Albania. The allies will recognize the autonomy of Albania under the suzerainty of the Porte, but not its sovereignty. Albania will become what Crete was and what Egypt is in its relation to Turkey. The Sultan will be the nominal ruler, but without political, administrative or military power. He will have the right to raise his flag in Albania and appoint a resident governor, but only for the purpose of ratifying the decisions of the local government.

TRIED HARD TO DIE.

Actress Made Seventeen Attempts on Her Life.

MONTREAL, Dec. 24.—Investigation into a charge of loitering lodged against Hazel E. Cook, an actress, who gives her home address as Spokane, Wash., revealed the fact that during the past three weeks she has attempted to commit suicide seventeen times, and on each occasion her attempt has been frustrated.

Miss Cook came here to act at the Theatre Royal in a stock company, but lost her position. Four times she was found preparing to jump into the St. Lawrence, once she drank coal oil, and on a number of occasions jabbed herself with scissors, once nearly opening a vein in her arm.

Yesterday morning she was arrested by the police clambering over a parapet preparatory to jumping from the Mountain Lookout.

Underground Stream Bursts.

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 24.—Hundreds of workmen engaged in constructing the Montdor tunnel through the Jura Mountains, between Italy and France, had a narrow escape from death yesterday when the pickaxe of one of the workmen opened a powerful subterranean stream.

The laborers fled before the greater mass of water which spurted up into the tunnel at the rate of 150 cubic feet a second, flooding it and the neighboring villages. The damage done by the water is heavy. There were no casualties.

Milk Scarce In Galt.

GALT, Dec. 24.—As the result of scarcity of milk in this section, producers have raised prices. Chief among reasons given for the limited supply is that the big dairy companies of Hamilton and Toronto are coming into the district to get milk. Wagons from Hamilton are collecting milk within miles of Galt and large quantities are shipped by express to Toronto.

Lifeboat Drifts Ashore.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., Dec. 24.—An empty lifeboat, which belonged to the Furness liner Florence, wrecked Friday night, has been washed ashore.

The search for the bodies was abandoned at noon yesterday because of a terrible gale which compelled all craft to put into harbor for safety.

The despatch says that the expedition against Goritzza, which was commanded by the Greek crown prince, experienced tremendous difficulties owing to the bad roads and the mountainous country and that it was extremely hard to obtain supplies.

A special despatch from Athens says the Greek army, advancing on Janina has suffered a check and that reinforcements have been sent out.

On Monday evening preceding the disappearance of Mrs. Love, just before he retired he noticed a butcher knife lying on the window ledge in the kitchen. This, he says, is about all that he forgot to tell at the inquest.

A BLOOD MEDICINE WITHOUT ALCOHOL.

Recently it has been definitely proven by experiments on animals that alcohol lowers the germicidal power of the body and that alcohol paralyzes the white corpuscles of the blood and renders them unable to take up and destroy disease germs. Disease germs cause the death of over one-half of the human race.

A blood medicine, made entirely without alcohol, which is a pure glyceric extract of roots, such as Bloodroot, Queen's root, Golden Seal root, Mandrake and Stone root, has been extensively sold by druggists for the past forty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

Dr. R. V. Pierce, the founder of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, and a physician of large experience and practice, was the first to make up an ALTERNATIVE EXTRACT of roots, without a particle of alcohol or narcotic.

"It is with the greatest of pleasure, that I write to let you know of the great benefit I received from the use of your medicines and self-treatment at home," writes Mrs. Wm. Hayes, of Ladysmith, B. C. "I suffered for three years from a running sore. Consulted four doctors but they failed to mend or give relief. Finally I was told I was in consumption and would have to consult a specialist concerning my ear, that the dead bone must be cut out before the wound would heal. A kind friend advised me to write to Dr. Pierce, which I did, and after seven months' use of the treatment the sore is healed, and I enjoy better health than I ever did. I dressed the wound with Dr. Pierce's All-Healing Salve and took the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' for my troubles. I shall always recommend your medicines.

SPEED OF SOUND.

An Easy Method of Judging the Distance It Travels.

There is an old saying that if you can count five between the flash and the thunder you are safe. Modern science tells us that if you can see the flash at all you are safe, because if it struck you you would have no time to see it. The speed of lightning is about 180 times that of sight.

The old idea was that if you could count five the storm was a mile away, which was considered a safe distance. Sound travels at the rate of 1,142 feet a second, or about a mile in five seconds. In order to count seconds accurately many photographers start by saying to themselves: "No one thousand, one one thousand, two one thousand, three one thousand," etc. This gives about the right space between each count of one, two, three, etc., if you stop at the number of seconds you want to time. With a little practice with a watch beside you this is accurate up to half a minute or more.

If you see a steam whistle blowing and note the instant it stops you can count the seconds until you lose the sound, and by allowing a fifth of a mile for each second you can judge the distance. The same is true of guns, or an explosion, or even of hammering or any loud sounds.—New York Press.

MARRIAGE BY PROXY.

This Curious Ceremony is a Purely Dutch Institution.

Some time ago a Boer in Pretoria was married to a girl in Amsterdam, in Holland, the ceremony constituting what the Dutch call handschoen, or glove marriage.

In spite of the fact that a distance of 6,000 miles lay between the bride in the Netherlands and the bridegroom in the Transvaal they were just as effectually married under the Dutch law as if both had been present in the same church.

The bridegroom sent to his friend, or best man, in Amsterdam a power of attorney to represent him as his proxy at the ceremony and at the same time forwarded his glove, which at the proper moment, when the two were made one, was held by both the bride and the proxy.

WHISTLER AT WORK.

The Eccentric Artist Had a Method That Was All His Own.

In "Memories of James McNeill Whistler," by Thomas R. Way, the author allows us a glance at the artist's methods during his residence at the white house in Tite street, built from the designs of his friend, E. W. Godwin, the architect:

"The studio was surprisingly different from the room he previously used in Lindsay row, and entirely unlike the studios usually occupied by other artists. I remember a long, not very lofty room, very light, with windows along one side; his canvas beside his model at one end and at the other, near the table which he used as a palette, an old Georgian looking glass, so arranged that he could readily see his canvas and model reflected in it. Those who used such a mirror (as he did constantly) will know that it is the most merciless of critics.

"I marveled then at his extraordinary activity, as he darted backward and forward to look at both painting and model from his point of view at the extreme end of the long studio. He always used brushes of large size with very long handles, three feet in length, and held them from the end with his arm stretched to its full extent. Each touch was laid on with great firmness, and his physical strength enabled him to do without the assistance of a maulstick, while the distance at which he stood from the canvas allowed him to have the whole of a large picture in sight and so judge the correct drawing of each touch."

BATTLEFIELD BRAVERY.

An Instance of Cool Courage in Face of Imminent Danger.

Perhaps few stories of battles so thoroughly illustrate cool bravery in the face of real danger as the little incident at a reconnaissance before the battle of Ulundi, of which Lord William Beresford was the hero.

The British were almost led into a terrible trap and discovered the danger only just in time. They turned to retreat, and the Zulus poured in a volley which brought down the gray horse of a mounted infantryman. His rider fell headforemost. The rest thought both

THE LURE OF GOLD

Romance and Tragedy of the Old Bonanza Trail.

A ROAD TO WEALTH AND CRIME

It Led to the Richest Deposits of Gold, in a Relatively Small Territory, Ever Discovered—Days of Strenuous Life and Frenzied Lawlessness.

The Bonanza trail began at Fort Laramie, Wyo. It ran east of the Owl Creek mountains, west of the Big Horn mountains, in a northwest direction to Livingston and Bozeman, then forking to the present Helena and Virginia City. In war and Indian department annals it is known as the Bozeman trail. Immediately, however, it was given the more romantic name, and for the best of reasons. It led to what were the richest deposits of gold, in a relatively small territory, that the world had ever seen.

Out of Alder gulch and Last Chance gulch, within 200 miles of each other in Montana, was taken, in ten short years, considerably more than $500,000,000 in pure gold. It was anybody's fortune, and the wonderful luck of the California gold diggers a few years before roused men to brave every hardship for these prizes.

It did not matter at all that these gulches were 2,000 miles from the nearest railroad and that other gold fields were far easier to reach. Here was the great El Dorado, and without a quail the gold seekers hurried into the unknown territory, defying Red Cloud and every other Indian, outlaw, renegade and holdup man.

How many lives were sacrificed along this trail to wealth will never be known. All that is certain is that there never was another chapter in the world's history like this. The long road into the mysterious country and the settlements of mining camps grew up almost in a single night. There were only five men in the little party when Bill Fairweather "washed" the first pan in Alder gulch and made a discovery even more wonderful than any in the palmy days of California or even in the later era of the Klondike.

Two years later Alder gulch, at one of the Bonanza trail's two ends, was among the most picturesque places in the country. The world was ransacked for men and women to give performances at the theaters, to offer free entertainment to the patrons of the various resorts. The gold hunters, gorged with prosperity, wanted amusements. Fine restaurants were opened and food brought in at great expense from beyond the seas. The smallest money was a twenty-five cent pinch of gold dust, taken from a pouch. It bought less than a copper cent does in any part of the United States today.

Meantime an unending stream of people poured into the new country. It is estimated by some that 90,000 in all took the trail at Fort Laramie.

The days of the trail were those of frenzied lawlessness, and many are the picturesque stories that have come down. Over the big road disputes

TALES OF GHOSTS

Lord Brougham's Curious Experience With a "Spook"

A COMPACT AND ITS STORY

The Creepy Story as It Was Told by the English Statesman's Secretary—Goes On to Say of Himself—A "Ghost" Cured

There was a certain Pisan name has been preserved in the proverbial sayings of the German cause he lived in continual fear of his own ghost. Just that happened to the German poet Goethe, when he was out riding spot somewhat removed from the haunts of men, he saw a figure approaching him, and as it came he saw that the rider was a person than himself—his own though dressed differently. Years after he found himself without forethought of the same place on horseback, and just as was the apparition self which he had met there ages before.

Lord Brougham (pronounced the English statesman, orator, after whom the well-known species of vehicles was named) remarkable experience with a "ghost" He tells the story in his autobiography published in 1871.

"A most remarkable thing to me," he says, "so remarkable that I must tell the story from the first. After I left the high school (burgh) I went with G., my intimate friend, to attend the university. We frequently walked and speculated on man's grave subjects, among them the immortality of the soul, the future state. This question of possibility, I will not say walking, but of the dead, to the living, were subjects of speculation, and we actually came to the folly of drawing up an epitaph written with our blood, to that whichever of us died first should appear to the other and tell him of the life after death."

"After we had finished college G. went to India, but he had an appointment there in the ice. He seldom wrote me, and a lapse of a few years I had almost forgotten him. Moreover, his falling little connection with England I seldom saw or heard any more, so that all the old school intimacy had died out and I had forgotten his existence. I had, as I have said, a warm bath, and in it and enjoying the comfort heat after the late freezing I had gone I turned my head toward the chair on which I deposited my clothes as I was getting out of the bath. On the G. calmly looking at me. He was out of the bath I know not, but covering my senses I found myself sprawling on the floor. The notion or whatever it was that I had the likeness of G. had disappeared."

attorney to represent him as his proxy at the ceremony and at the same time forwarded his glove, which at the proper moment, when the two were made one, was held by both the bride and the proxy.

The wedding was duly registered at Amsterdam and at Pretoria, where the bridegroom filed an affidavit with the landdrost, or magistrate.

This curious form of marriage is a purely Dutch institution, the custom having originated, it is said, in the old times of Dutch-Batavian rule. It is, however, a dead letter in the Transvaal since the English took over that colony.—New York Press.

After the Deluge.

She had just returned from her first trip to Europe and everybody was given an opportunity to know about it. One by one they gently extricated themselves, but at last she found a silent youth in a corner who proved to be an attentive listener. To him she rhapsodized on the beauty of life "abroad," and especially in England. It is difficult, however, for the most enthusiastic tourist to exist long without eliciting from an auditor some expression of wonder or applause, so she sought to break her listener's respectful silence even at the expense of losing a little time herself. "Were you ever in England?" she asked.

"Yes," he said modestly. "I was born there, and I am thirty-six years old. I lived there until I came to America three months ago. If you can tell me anything about America I should be awfully glad, as I wish to learn all I can."—New York Press.

terrible trap and discovered the danger only just in time. They turned to retreat, and the Zulus poured in a volley which brought down the gray horse of a mounted infantryman. His rider fell headforemost. The rest thought both man and horse were killed at first, but the former soon struggled to his feet, with his face covered with blood and dazed with his fall.

Lord William Beresford, seeing what had happened, pulled up and, in the face of advancing hosts of yelling savages within easy range, quietly trotted back and told the man to mount behind him.

With a cool courage scarcely second to Lord William's, the man refused, noble fellow that he was, preferring the certain sacrifice of his own life to the probability of destroying his preserver.

The reply was admirable, terse and telling. The savages swarmed closer and closer; bullets rattled around them. The two who lingered were almost within reach of the assegais, and Lord William said:

"Get up or I'll punch your head!"

The man obeyed, and rescuer and rescued escaped.—Pearson's Weekly.

Why Blackie Wore the Plaid.

Professor Blackie frequently stayed at Dr. Donald Macleod's house in Glasgow. One night, said the doctor, we were sitting up together. Blackie said in his brusque way, "Whatever other faults I have, I am free from vanity." An incredulous smile on my face roused him. "You don't believe that. Give me an instance." Being thus challenged, I said, "Why do you walk about flourishing a plaid continually?" "I'll give you the history of that, sir. When I was a poor man and when my wife and I had our difficulties she one day drew my attention to the threadbare character of my surtout and asked me to order a new one. I told her I could not afford it just then, when she went, like a noble woman, and put her own plaid shawl on my shoulders, and I have worn a plaid ever since in memory of her loving deed."

Man Who Beheaded Charles I.

The mysterious masked man who beheaded Charles I. remains the British analogue for the Man With the Iron Mask. Lilly, the lying astrologer, denounced Cornet Joyce at the restoration, but Joyce on the fatal 30th of January was not in favor with Cromwell. The parish register of Whitechapel records the burial in 1649 of Richard Brandon, the common hangman, and opposite the entry a contemporary hand wrote that "he cut off the head of Charles the First." Brandon himself asserted that "they made him do it for £30," with which he drank himself to death.—Dundee Advertiser.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

it is estimated by some that 30,000 in all took the trail at Fort Laramie.

The days of the trail were those of frenzied lawlessness, and many are the picturesque stories that have come down. Over the big road disputes about cards were of daily occurrence. The man who started an argument did so with the knowledge that it was his life or the other man's, for he was calling into question the "honor" of the "shark." Swindlers sold "mines," fought with their proposed victims and killed without compunction.

Armed robbers ran off stock, stole horses from one class of immigrants and sold them to another. As the horse was the sole means of transportation and valuable beyond human life, "hoss stealing" was set down by the "districts" as a crime punishable by death. There were few courts, and such as there were were miles from the trail. A jury would hence be at once impaneled among those present, the man tried and if found guilty hanged to a tree without ceremony.

Hotels flourished and were prosperous beyond imagining, for every one spent money, and there was much flaunting. In the higher grade establishments beverages were served in cut glass; champagne was common. Every resort was crowded with people. The newcomers frequented these places in quest of information, paid 25 cents for a glass of beer made from barley grown by the ex-Confederate soldiers at Bozeman and sold to the Virginia breweries for 8 cents a pound, and not enough could be received to supply the demand. Table board cost $7 a day for the very cheapest, and if one slept in a chair in the hotel lobby at night, when the rooms were all rented, he paid $1.50 for the privilege.

Gold was the only medium of exchange. A pinch of it, between the forefinger and the thumb, as has been said, counted 25 cents. There would be a tendency with some men to take just a little bit more. When that tendency was noticed in a man he was given hours to leave town—and it was seldom over two hours. The wise man did not stand on ceremony or protest—he "vamosed," in camp vernacular.

The newspapers of the city sold for 25 cents a copy, red hot from the press, and full of news of lynchings, new diggings, "clean ups," "hold ups," "bad men" and gossip of a breezy character. Ham and eggs to order cost $2.50. Eggs were worth 50 cents apiece and an ordinary meal of deer or buffalo meat, with potatoes or coffee and bread, was never less than $1.50. A man was very poor to get down to fare so coarse as that.

It made no difference what a man might have been back in "the states," if he was "on the square" in Virginia he was accepted at par.—F. J. Arkins in Harper's Weekly.

ES OF GHOSTS

rougham's Curious Experience With a "Spook."

PACT AND ITS SEQUEL

Copy Story as It Was Told in English Statesman's Autobiography—Goethe Once Saw a Specter Himself—A "Ghost" Cuvier Saw.

There was a certain Pisander whose name has been preserved in one of the old sayings of the Greeks believed in continual fear of seen ghost. Just that thing happened to the German poet Goethe. One day when he was out riding in a somewhat removed from the usual of men, he saw a horseman following him, and as it drew near that the rider was no less a man than himself—his other, self-dressed differently. Twenty years later he found himself quite forethought of the matter in place on horseback and dress—was the apparition of himself which he had met there two decades before.

rougham (pronounced Broom), an Irish statesman, orator and author whom the well known of vehicles was named, had a tale experience with a "spook." The story in his autobiography is in 1871.

It is a remarkable thing happened he says, "so remarkable that I left the story from the beginning of the high school (in Edinburgh) went with G., my most intelligent, to attend the classes in university. We frequently in our discussions and speculated upon rare subjects, among others immortality of the soul and a tale. This question and the story, I will not say of ghosts but of the dead appearing living, were subjects of much on, and we actually committed of drawing up an agreement, with our blood, to the effect whoever of us died first should of the other and thus solve the death."

When we had finished classes at Edinburgh, I went to India, having got employment there in the civil service. I seldom wrote me, and after a few years I had almost forgotten. Moreover, my family having connection with Edinburgh, I saw or heard anything of that all the old schoolboy in Edinburgh died out and I had nearly forgotten his existence. I had taken, said, a warm bath, and while enjoying the comfort of the bath the late freezing I had undressed I turned my head round to see a chair on which I had denuded clothes as I was about to take the bath. On the chair sat a figure looking at me. How I got out of the bath I know not, but on re-entring my senses I found myself on the floor. The apparition whatever it was that had taken the place of G. had disappeared."

EZRA'S HARD LUCK.

It Began With His Name and Ended on His Tombstone.

Tom McNeal of Topeka was talking to Abe Peters about luck, so Tom reports. Tom thought there was no such thing as luck, but Abe protested.

"Take the case of Ezra Boll," said Abe. "To begin with, think of his name. A name like that is hard enough luck to prove my contention, but Ezra lived up to it. When he was a baby he fell into the horse trough and was almost drowned. Then he got hold of a can of concentrated lye and it took them four weeks to bring him round. He fell out of an apple tree when he was six and broke both arms and a leg, and just as he was hobbling round again he went on a watermelon stealing expedition with six other boys. The others got away, but the dog caught Ezra and chewed him up until the farmer came along and he put on finishing touches with a harness trace. He fell in love when he was seventeen, spent all he had for buggy rides and candy for the red cheeked object of his adoration—and she shook him and married another. A mule kicked him and broke six ribs. He had a lot of hogs and they died of cholera on the identical day when hogs reached 9 cents a pound, live weight. He had a big crop of wheat and a hail-storm came along and ruined it one hour after his ball insurance policy had lapsed. He got $500 to make a payment on his land, put in the bank and the bank busted.

"A cyclone wrecked his house and barn and crippled all his family except his mother-in-law, who escaped unhurt. He bought four gold bricks and took some counterfeit money in pay for two good horses.

"Then he died. When they were taking him to the cemetery the team pulling the hearse ran away going down hill and scattered the remains of Ezra along the side of the road.

"In the course of time his family marked his grave by an appropriate stone on which the stonecutter got the date of his birth wrong and misspelled his name in two places.

Tub Toys For Baby.

Quite the cutest and most practical thing for the baby that has been thought of lately is a small, best quality bath sponge, which is at the same time a tub toy. The top is the head of an indestructible celluloid doll, joined to the sponge with a few tiny blue bows and a furling of blue satin. It is so light that it floats in the water and so is always in reach, and of course it affords unlimited amusement to the child. Any one who has struggled to amuse a child in its tub and end the bath expeditiously will rejoice in this delightfully attractive dolly. It may be had for 75 cents.

A BIG BANK VAULT

How Its Doors Were Opened by a Message From the Sea.

THE MAGIC OF AN AEROGRAM.

A Dilemma From Which a Great Financial Institution Extricated Itself In Double Quick Time by a Rapid Exchange of Wireless Dispatches.

To the ordinary layman, too busy or too indifferent to bother his head with scientific matters, wireless telegraphy is somewhat of a mystery. In a general way he knows that by it messages are flashed through the air over oceans and mountains, but he does not realize to what an extent and in what varied roles the aerial magic plays its parts in daily life. In "The Wireless Man" the author, Francis A. Collins, narrates an instance in which aerograms averted a possible financial mishap. He writes:

"A secret, even a very big one, may be entrusted to the wireless man and sent halfway across the Atlantic with complete safety. There was the case, for instance, of the president of a great New York bank who sailed for Europe without leaving the combination of the locks of the vaults. As a rule, the combination is a single word, and the secret is known only to two or three. In this case, by an oversight, there was no one left ashore who knew the key. The money and securities of the bank were very safely locked away, and hours of work would be required to force the locks of the safe deposit vaults.

"The bank president's steamer had sailed at 6 o'clock of a summer's morning to catch a favorable tide, and when the bank's officials tried to open the vaults at about 9 o'clock the steamer carrying the secret was upward of two hours at sea. A hasty examination showed that there was but one way to open the vaults, short of breaking into them, and that was by getting the code from the president, serenely unconscious of the troubles ashore. To delay opening the vaults would, of course, be a very serious matter. If the piles of money were not ready behind the barred windows promptly at 10, the fact would be known within a few minutes throughout the financial section. A serious run on a bank has been started for a less cause.

"In the old days, before the cable, the secret could not have been gained in less than two or three weeks at best, or until a message had reached the president by mail and returned across the Atlantic. The cable alone would have cut the delay in two by catching the traveler on his arrival on the other side. Meanwhile the bank officials, hastily summoned to a conference, had acted quickly. The wireless stations had been notified, and a message explaining the situation was flashed from the top of a high building in New York and from the Sea Gate and Nantucket stations. All this was the work of less than ten minutes.

"Now the combination word used to lock up these millions in gold, currency and securities is, of course, not a piece of information to be flashed broadcast along the Atlantic coast. It would be known to scores of people, even if the stations receiving guarded the secret with the utmost care. The officials therefore impressed upon the president the importance of sending his message in the private code used by the bank in its important cables. As the hour for opening the bank approached the officials waited with an impatience which may be imagined.

"The wireless message was handed to the bank president as he sat at breakfast well out to sea. It was now exactly 9:16. There was a sudden vacancy at that particular table. After one glance at the aerogram the president, realizing the situation to the last detail, rushed madly for his stateroom to search for his code book. A few moments later a dignified elderly gentleman rushed into the wireless booth, demanding at any cost that his message be given the right of way. He got it.

"An aerogram expressed in an unintelligible cipher was soon being flashed with the full power of the apparatus. The wireless stations along the coast had been ordered to expedite the message in every way and were waiting anxiously for it. It was read by two stations on the Long Island coast and repeated hurriedly to New York. A few minutes later the clerk at the telephone in the bank was carefully writing out the strange jumble of letters and translating them into intelligible English. The clock pointed to twenty minutes to 10, the bank's opening hour, when the great steel door swung noiselessly open on its hinges and the day was saved."

He Was Precise.

"The truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth," is the motto of police witnesses at Ystrad.

"Did you see him coming through the door?" asked a solicitor in court.

"No, sir; through the doorway," answered the police precision in the box.—London Globe.

SIR RICHARD LEFT $80,000

Estate Valued at $238,000, But Debts Reach $155,000—Life Income for Lady Cartwright.

Ostawa, Dec. 19.—(Can. Press).—The will of Sir Richard Cartwright was entered for probate at the court house here to-day.

The total estate is valued at $238,392.90 but out of this debts, amounting to $155,000, will be taken. This leaves his widow, three daughters and six sons with less than $80,000 to share among them.

To his widow he leaves all the household furniture, plate, linen, china, silver, glass, books, pictures, prints, provisions and other household effects in addition to a legacy, to be paid to her by the executors.

All the rest of his estate and effects, both real and personal, were left to the disposal of his two sons, Dr. Richard Conway Cartwright and Alexander Dobbs Cartwright, of Ottawa, who are to sell the real estate together or in parcels by public auction or private contract, with power to make any stipulations as to the title or evidence of the title or otherwise.

The surviving sons will also call in and convert into money the residuary personal estate, and therefrom pay all debts and funeral expenses.

The annual income, rents, issues and profits of this residuary are to be paid in quarterly payments to his wife during the whole period of her life.

BEQUESTS TO DAUGHTERS.

To his three daughters—Harriet Eliza, Frances Medeline and Mary Josephine, he leaves $20,000 each, to be paid after the death of his wife. In the event of anyone of them dying, leaving an heir or heirs, the money is to be bequeathed to them when they are twenty-one years of age.

In the event of his wife dying, one-sixth of the residuary will be left to each of his six sons—Robert, Richard Conway, Alexander Dobbs, Henry, Francis Lennox and Conway.

The late Sir Richard Cartwright owned real property valued at $28,000, bank and other stocks valued at $68,790.27, furniture valued at $3000 and several other effects, bringing the total up to $238,392.90.

No mention is made in the will of the proceeds of Sir Richard's book, which is reported as having a tremendous sale.

Save Babies' Lives. For Babies and Small Children. (Made in France.)

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she would not live. The Tablets cured her.—Mr. E. R. McBride, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—Mrs. JAMES RIDDELL, Burrydale, Ont.

We have hundreds of such letters. If the Tablets were not what you need we would not offer to give them away and prepay them. If your baby is not well send for trial package. Hennequin Tablets have the letter "H" stamped upon them—this is your guarantee. All dealers, 25c per package, or 5 for $1.00 sent postpaid to any address.

2.—That the vote of the electors of the said Village of Bath will be taken on this by-law by the returning officer hereinafter named on the sixth day of January, one thousand nine hundred and thirteen, commencing at nine o'clock in the morning and continuing until five o'clock in the afternoon at the undermentioned places:

3.—That on the 23rd day of December, A. D., 1912, at his office in the village of Bath, at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon the reeve shall appoint in writing, signed by himself, two persons to attend at the final summing up of the votes by the clerk, and one person to attend at each polling place on behalf of the persons interested in and desirous of promoting the passing of this by-law, and a like number on behalf of the persons interested in and desirous of opposing the passing of this by-law.

4.—That the Clerk of the said Municipal Council of the village of Bath shall attend at the Town Hall, at the hour of five o'clock in the afternoon of the sixth day of January, A. D., 1913, to sum up the number of votes given for and against this By-Law.

5.—This By-Law shall come into force and take effect as from the first day of May next after the final passing thereof.

Council Chamber, Dec. 4th, 1912.

selecting a Church, to be joint-ners with our Lord in the honorable work of blessing all the families of the earth. The number who attain this position is limited. Our Lord calls them a Little Flock, to whom it is the Father's good pleasure to give the Kingdom.

Pastor Russell said that St. Paul refers to preaching the Gospel as "foolishness," not in his own estimation, but in that of the worldly-wise. That a man of Jesus' ability should go about with a few disciples, performing some miracles and inviting chiefly the poor to follow Him, seems foolish to the world. They ask, Why did He not make friends with the Scribes, the Pharisees and the Doctors of the Law, whose influence with the people would have counted?

In reply, he asked, If our Lord had done thus, who would have crucified Him? How would God's Plan have been carried out. It is well for the world that Jesus did not follow the suggestions of worldly wisdom. Truly, the Wisdom of God is foolishness with the world, even as worldly wisdom is foolishness with God.

From the world's standpoint, it seems foolish for God to invite any to serve Him—for an all-powerful God to entreat where He could compel obedience. Earthly kings enforce their commands; in fact, every one executes his own will. The Bible explains, however, that God seeks those to worship Him who do so in spirit and in truth. Therefore these must be given opportunity to disobey, if they choose to do so; and persecutions, tribulations and attacks from the world, the flesh and the Devil are permitted to test them.

The Divine Plan outlined in the Bible for the New Age is different. Under Messiah's Kingdom darkness, ignorance and superstition will pass away. No longer will it require faith to understand that there is a God, that the Bible is His Word, and that trials and afflictions are blessings in disguise. Then the righteous shall prosper and evil-doers shall be cut off. Faithfulness will bring the Divine reward of increase of strength—mental, moral and physical.

All of God's people are ordained to preached. The begetting influence of the Holy Spirit is only ordination necessary, and without it no one has Divine authority to preach. God's Book makes no division of His people into clergy and laity. Let us declare God's Message in its purity and simplicity. Let us not be disappointed that the worldly-wise consider it foolishness, and that it brings odium, as it did upon the Lord and His Apostles.

God will find the "peculiar people" whom He seeks. As Messiah's associates they will "declare the decree." All mankind shall be brought to a knowledge of the Truth, the incorrigible destroyed, and "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God."

MONTREAL, Dec. 23.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Dec. 21, were 1250 cattle, 1300 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 350 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale consisted of 750 cattle, 700 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 150 calves.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being steady, owing to the fact that the supply was small, but it was quite ample to fill all requirements, as butchers and packers in most cases bought sufficient stock last week to provide for the holiday trade, consequently the demand was somewhat limited and trade on the whole was rather slow.

The offerings of sheep and lambs was small and the tone firm, at unchanged prices. Demand was good. The trade in calves was quiet. In hogs the feeling was firm with a good demand from packers and an active trade was done in this

UNDESIRABLE.

OH, wouldn't you just hate it—
What could be the excuse?—
To be a Wall street broker
And get the world's abuse,
To roll around in money
And have, perhaps, the gout
And be the bad example
That people pointed out?

It must be very trying
And really quite a strain
To handle only millions
And ride by special train,
And when there was a panic
That came without applause
To listen to the people
Declare you were the cause.

It seems to rank outsiders
To be a pleasant thing
When there must be a merger
To sit and pull the string.
But when you note the murmur
About election time
It isn't nuts and candy
To hear it called a crime.

Life is not milk and honey
Or some such fancy drink
To those who sit in Wall street
And make the money chink,
Not in this modern era
When people have a vote
And when their leaders ever
Are looking for a goat.

An Incongruity

By JOHN GALLAGER, JR.

After my admission to the bar a friend of Mr. Larkins, of the law firm of Larkins, Larrabee & Lincoln, gave me a letter to him recommending me for a salaried position in his office. I was advised to see Mr. Larkins at his house, where I would receive more friendly attention than in his office. I called about 4 o'clock, expecting to find him returned from his office, but since he had been detained there later than usual I concluded to wait for him. I was shown into a large drawing room as dimly lighted as those of most city dwellings. Indeed, since it was winter and the days were short there was hardly any light at all because of heavy window drapery.

A door opened into a conservatory, and while sitting in profound silence I heard a succession of oaths. There were two incongruities connected with the matter. In the first place, the profanity came from out a profusion of flowers and, in the second, was spoken in a woman's musical voice. Furthermore, they did not express irritation, the lady who spoke them seeming to be simply rolling them out just to hear them. In other words, as they were uttered there was no meaning to them.

They soon stopped and were followed by a few notes of song, in the same sweet voice as the oaths. Then a young girl came out of the conservatory, passed through the drawing room, unconscious of my presence, and, swearing like a trooper as she went, passed out into the hall and upstairs. I got a view of her as she passed a gas jet that had just been lighted, and her face was as innocent of guile as her tongue was defiled.

I was especially pleased that she did not see me, for she would doubtless have been deeply mortified. Mr. Larkins came in presently, and I presented my note of introduction, which was instrumental in securing for me the place I coveted. I soon learned that he had a daughter who was considered a beautiful girl, and I inferred that she was the one I had heard uttering profanity. I was curious about her, for I could not understand how a refined woman could have a fancy for listening to oaths uttered by herself.

I had not been long in the employ of Larkins, Larrabee & Lincoln when Mr. Larkins invited me to dine at his

"No; I hadn't heard about Joe Taylor's cow getting mired in the huckleberry swamp," replied Uncle Abner Shorts as some one in the crowd at the postoffice put the question, "but I've heard sadder news than that today—yes, a good deal sadder. Is it that any one we all know is dead? No, but perhaps it was better for him if he was dead. I don't want to keep you in suspense, and I will therefore say that George Green got married today for the second time.

"I hadn't looking for anybody to be shocked dead at the news. It has just set me to thinking and aroused a heap of recollections. You all know that I lost my wife three years ago, and after a year I married again and am now living with No. 2. I reckon it's also pretty well known that No. 2 bosses the roost.

"There was folks in this village, gentlemen, who said that I'd grieve myself to death over my loss, and there were others who said I'd be snooping around after No. 2 within a year. As for me, I felt that I was wasting away and was powerfully surprised one day to find myself eating heartily of a bolled dinner. From that time I began to pick up, but for months afterward I had no more thoughts of marrying ag'in than Lemuel Goodheart has of putting his foot ag'in a hot stove. It seemed to me that the man who lost such an angel of a wife as I had deserved to be shot for thinking of marrying ag'in.

"Just when the idea hit me that I'd better look around a little for another woman I can't say. I think it was after I'd cooked my own meals, made my own bed, sewed on my own buttons and washed my own shirts for seven or eight months. Then the feeling stole over me that there was room in the house for another. It sorter skeered me at first, but I'm saying that it's a feeling you can get used to in a day or two. As soon as I began to wonder if I really ought to marry ag'in I found myself advancing a dozen reasons why I should.

"Well, it hain't no secret that I looked around and found the Widder Glenn. She might have been looking around at the same time, but I'm not going to say that such is the case. At first it was a question with me whether a

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Between the people who don't remember and those who don't forget a poor mortal has a hard time.

It isn't nice to be suspicious, not how about the persons who excite the suspicion?

It may not be hard to be wrong, but it certainly is wrong to be hard.

fanity. I was curious about her, for I could not understand how a refined woman could have a fancy for listening to oaths uttered by herself.

I had not been long in the employ of Larkins, Larrabee & Lincoln when Mr. Larkins invited me to dine at his house. I accepted gladly and on the evening appointed appeared at the house in evening dress and wearing my best expression. It seemed singular that I should be desirous of impressing a girl who could swear "like an army in Flanders," but such was the case. When introduced to her I found it difficult to repress a smile, thinking as I did how shocked she would be did she know that I had heard her at her worst.

I can't say that Miss Laura Larkins was a demure young lady, but she gave one the impression of being very refined, modest, pure. Indeed, she was the last person I would have supposed would indulge in the unladylike habit of swearing. To tell the truth, there was something so novel, in such marked contrast, in hearing a lovely girl with a sweet voice uttering profanity that I wished she would do it again. But instead her words were well chosen and pure English, there was not a bit of slang, and everything she said was refined.

This introduction at the house of my employer resulted in a love affair between me and Miss Larkins. After awhile I was made a junior member of the law firm where I was employed, and, being approved by Mr. Larkins as a son-in-law, I was accepted and duly engaged. While I had been fascinated by the incongruity of oaths spoken in a melodious voice, I was at times troubled by this peculiarity. Might not a girl who would give vent to such expletives have something bad about her inner self which some day would crop out to shock me? I wished to tell her that I had heard her swear and bear her explanation, but could not bring myself to do so. So I went on, subject to occasional fits of terror lest I would marry one whose devilish nature might burst forth at any moment.

My fiancée was at the time I met her a college girl. One day I took up in her house the book of a play in which she had acted as an undergraduate. One part, that of a man, was marked throughout. While reading it I came upon the very oaths I had heard her utter. Here was an explanation. She had performed this part.

A moment later when she entered the room I fired them at her.

"Oh," she said, "you have been reading the part I played at college. We girls were expected to leave those swear words out. But we never did at rehearsal."

"Why not?"

"Why does any girl fancy what she is supposed to let alone?"

Then I told her of the first time I saw her—how while I was shocked I was pleased. She said that it was that same shock, that desire to break in upon forbidden things, that pleased girls. She also confessed that several of the girls who took part in the play, unexpressed by authority, were in the habit of rolling out the oaths I had heard her use just for the pleasure of doing something they had no business to do. As for herself, she played the part of the man who did the swearing.

I asked her to do it just once more and after that never to do it again. She declined to oblige me.

"Well, it hain't no secret that I looked around and found the Widder Glenn. She might have been looking around at the same time, but I'm not going to say that such is the case. At first it was a question with me whether a widower could love for the second time. Within a week after I had hit the widder's trail that question was settled in the affirmative. I found myself a heap more in love than on the first occasion. All of you was kind enough to say that I made a durned fool of myself, and, though I couldn't see it then, I'm admitting most of it now."

"Gentlemen, I was two long months hesitating over asking the widder to be mine, and yet the rest of you was saying that she'd jump at the chance. Mebbe you was right. I know that when I finally managed to get up the courage I hadn't hardly got my mouth open before she says yes."

"And now comes the real p'int. I'd been boss of the house, same as all of you are boss of yours. Wasn't it natural for me to keep right on bossing? Had the thought of surrendering the reins of government occurred to me? Is a man and a husband to be treated like a child or a slave? At the first go-off her bossing was a novelty, and I rather liked it and encouraged it. I was still in love, you see. After about a month the novelty wore off, and I began to assert myself. I took the bossing business into my own hands. What followed? Why, that wife got right up on her hind legs and made the air blue for forty rods around. She got out ten words to my oae. When I took her by the ear to sit her down and hush her up she lit into my hair and pulled it out by handfuls."

"Gentlemen, who bosses the roost? Mrs. Shorts!"

"Who handles the cash? Mrs. Shorts!"

"Who tells me when I can go and when I shall come? Mrs. Shorts!"

"Who gives me liberty to draw my breath? Mrs. Shorts!"

"I'm only telling you what you all know and what is the gossip of the town. She made up her mind when she became No. 2 that she'd be the boss, and she's carried it out. That's the way with all No. 2's. No. 1 knuckles down and lets you do the bossing and thinks it's all right, but No. 2 is no such chicken. She intended to get the whip hand when she married you, and she's going to keep it or raise such a row that you'll wish you was in your grave."

"Understand, gentlemen, that I'm saying nothing agin Mrs. Shorts. She's finer'n silk. O Lord, but such pickled peaches as she does put up! And apple sass—it makes you grin from your neck to your heels! Just one of the nicest women in the country, and I hope that she'll outlive me by twenty years, but I have had to use her 'as an illustration. She married me to be boss, and she is boss, same as all the other No. 2's. I hain't exactly saying that the man who loses No. 1 shouldn't look for a No. 2, but I'm saying that if he does he ought to know what's coming to him and what he'll be sure to get. I've fit agin it and fit and fit, but it's no go. To-night she sends me down here after a gallon of lie and says I can stay just forty minutes. Them forty is so mighty nigh up that I've got to get a hump on me and run all the way home, and even then Mrs. Shorts may be standing there with a club to hit me when I jump through the gate."

NEW YEAR THE STAFF!

GORGEOUS CHORISTERS.

Singers of the Private Chapel in St. James' Palace.

There are ten boys in London who Sunday and on state occasions wear suits of clothes that in each instance cost something like $200. The thus expensively and brilliantly dressed are the choristers belonging to the private chapel in St. James' Palace. When arrayed in their state they are truly a gorgeous sight.

White cloth is the foundation of their costume. Bands of royal purple in rows of heavy gold lace are ornaments. Old lace ruffles are at the neck and wrists. These are so valuable and so difficult to place that they are worn only on most special occasions. At other times white lawn bands take their place. The boys must take great care of their suits, which must endure three years. The "undress" suits are replaced every eight months.

The choir is one of the historical institutions of Great Britain, and many old time customs, including the names of the boys, are retained to this day. The choir has numbered among its members such distinguished musicians as Arthur Sullivan, Edward Lloyd, John Goss and Dr. E. J. Hopkins. It is the right of the head boy to demand a guinea as "spur money" from a visitor entering the chapel wearing a top hat. It is said that when Arthur Sullivan was head boy the Duke of Wellington would always come spurred to the chapel, in order that he might have the pleasure of paying the forfeit to his favorite chorister.—Harper's Weekly.

UNITY OF LIFE.

of Animals and Plants Alike and Governed by Same Laws.

Protoplasm, the literal translation of which means "the first man made," is the name given by a German scientist in 1846 to the shiny, granular, fluid contents of vegetable cells. It looks like the white of an egg, and can be analyzed into four chemical elements—carbon, oxygen, nitrogen and hydrogen. It is now recognized as a fundamental basis for all life. The smallest particle of it goes through the same cycle of life—motion, feeling, feeding and reaction. When in some unconscious way it grows a membrane for a living or a little nucleus, a kernel where within it, science calls it a cell.

These cells are the same in plants and animals. Professor Jacques Loeb has shown the importance of this fact. In studying plants, he explained how no one can say that they have "life" without these cells.

THE EARTH CRUST

Its Density, Its Thickness and the Pressure It Exerts.

A BAR TO WORLD EXPLOSION.

The Reasons Why This Old Planet of Ours, With All Its Pentup Fiery, Volcanic or Gaseous Forces at Work, Could Never Be Blown to Fragments.

Some writers have accounted for the asteroids on the theory that they are the fragments of a world that from some unknown cause has been exploded in its orbit. Similarly, many have thought that perhaps at some distant time, when the seas shall have been drunk up into the cracked and thickened crust of the age-shrunken earth and the volcanoes—those vents of the fiery interior—shall have become choked and extinct, the pentup gases generated from the descending moisture by the still great internal heat may actually explode the old earth like a veritable bombshell.

But that can never happen.

In 1883 Krakatoa, a sleepy old volcano on a small island in the strait of Sunda, between Java and Sumatra, began to show marked signs of uneasiness. Round the volcano the quaking earth opened enormous fissures in the bottom of the sea, down which rushed the great mass of water. Then the fissures closed and confined the engulfed flood in the hot subterranean depths. The water was quickly converted into steam, the steam into dissociated gases, without room for expansion. It exerted a pressure equal to that of the strongest dynamite.

The great chimney of Krakatoa, sealed since the memory of man, barred the normal path of escape. Higher and higher mounted the pressure under the huge mass of the volcano; then, of a sudden, came a blast that actually shook the earth. Never before in historic time had there been such a shock. The whole top of the old mountain was blown into the sky. The recoil was distinctly felt clear through the terrestrial ball.

This great cataclysm has been cited as an indication of the power of the pentup forces that may some day disrupt the earth itself. Let us examine the underlying principles that must guide us in passing judgment on the correctness of this theory.

The Woman In the Alcove

By ANNA KATHARINE GREEN.

Author of "The Millionaire Baby," "The Filigree Ball," "The House in the Mist," "The Amethyst Box," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1906, THE BOBBS-MERRILL COMPANY.

In "The Woman In the Alcove" Anna Katharine Green has woven a plot of unusual intricacy and interest. The mystery is most cleverly unraveled through the agency of no professional detective, but by a young woman whose heart is enlisted in the cause of one of the suspects. She is made to tell her story with all the well known skill of the author, which has won for her the highest place among American writers of stories of mystery.

CHAPTER I.

I WAS perhaps the plainest girl in the room that night. I was also the happiest—up to 1 o'clock. Then my whole world crumbled, or at least suffered an eclipse. Why and how I am about to relate.

I was not made for love. This I had often said to myself, very often of late. In figure I am too diminutive, in face far too unbeautiful for me to cherish expectations of this nature. Indeed love had never entered into my plan of life, as was evinced by the nurse's diploma I had just gained after three years of hard study and severe training.

I was not made for love. But if I had been, had I been gifted with height, regularity of feature or even with that eloquence of expression which redeems all defects save those which savor of deformity, I knew well whose eye I should have chosen to please, whose heart I should have felt proud to win.

This knowledge came with a rush to my heart—did I say heart? I should have said understanding, which is something very different—when at the end of the first dance I looked up from the midst of the bevy of girls by whom I was surrounded and saw Anson Durand's fine figure emerging from that quarter of the hall where our host and hostess stood to receive their guests. His eye was roaming hither and thither, and his manner was both eager and expectant. Whom was he seeking? Some one of the many bright and vivacious girls about me, for he turned almost instantly our way. But which one?

I thought I knew. I remembered at whose house I had met him first, at whose house I had seen him many times since. She was a lovely girl, witty and vivacious, and she stood at this very moment at my elbow. In her beauty lay the life, the natural lure for a man of his gifts and striking personality. If I continued to watch I happy! As the conservatory filled and we passed back into the adjoining room the glimpse I caught of myself in one of the mirrors startled me into thinking so, for had it not been for the odd color of my dress and the unique way in which I wore my hair that night I should not have recognized the beaming girl who faced me so naively from the depths of the responsive glass.

Can one be too happy? I do not know. I know that one can be too perplexed, too burdened and too sad.

Thus far I have spoken only of myself in connection with the evening's elaborate function; but, though entitled by my old Dutch blood to a certain social consideration which I am happy to say never failed me, I even in this hour of supreme satisfaction attracted very little attention and awoke small comment. There was another woman present better calculated to do this—a fair woman, large and of a bountiful presence, accustomed to conquest and gifted with the power of carrying off her victories with a certain lazy grace irresistibly fascinating to the ordinary man; a gorgeously appareled woman, with a diamond on her breast too vivid for most women, almost too vivid for her. I noticed this diamond early in the evening, and then I noticed her. She was not as fine as the diamond, but she was very fine, and had I been in a less ecstatic frame of mind I might have envied the homage she received from all the men, not excepting him upon whose arm I leaned. Later there was no one in the world I envied less.

The ball was a private and very elegant one. There were some notable guests. One gentleman in particular was pointed out to me, as an Englishman of great distinction and political importance. I thought him a very interesting man for his years, but odd and a trifle self centered. Though greatly courted, he seemed strangely restless under the fire of eyes to which he was constantly subjected and only happy when free to use his own in contemplation of the scene about him. Had I been less absorbed in my own happiness I might have noted sooner than I did that this contemplation was confined to such groups as gathered about the lady with the diamond. But this I failed to observe at the time, and consequently was much surprised to come upon him at the end of one of the dances talking with this lady in an animated and courtly manner totally opposed to the apathy, amounting to boredom, with which he had hitherto met all advances.

who deliberately chose a nurse's life when an indulgent uncle's heart and home were open to me, shrink from braving poverty with the man I love? We will begin as simply as you please"—

"No," he peremptorily put in, yet with a certain hesitancy which seemed to speak of doubts he hardly acknowledged to himself, "I will not marry you if I must expose you to privation or to the genteel poverty I hate. I love you more than you realize and wish to make your life a happy one. I cannot give you all you have been accustomed to in your rich uncle's house, but if matters prosper with me, if the chance I have built on succeeds—and it will fail or succeed tonight—you will have those comforts which love will heighten into luxuries and—and"—

He was becoming incoherent and this time with his eyes fixed elsewhere than on my face. Following his gaze, I discovered what had distracted his attention. The lady with the diamond was approaching us on her way to the alcove. She was accompanied by two gentlemen, both strangers to me, and her head, sparkling with brilliants, was turning from one to the other with an indolent grace. I was not surprised that the man at my side quivered and made a start as if to rise. She was a gorgeous image. In comparison with her imposing figure in its trailing robe of rich pink velvet my diminutive frame in its sea green gown must have looked as faded and colorless as a half obliterated pastel.

"A striking woman," I remarked as I saw he was not likely to resume the conversation which her presence had interrupted. "And what a diamond!"

The glance he cast me was peculiar. "Did you notice it particularly?" he asked.

Astonished, for there was something very uneasy in his manner so that I half expected to see him rise and join the group he was so eagerly watching without waiting for my lips to frame a response, I quickly replied:

"It would be difficult not to notice what one would naturally expect to see only on the breast of a queen. But perhaps she is a queen. I should judge so from the homage which follows her."

His eyes sought mine. There was inquiry in them, but it was an inquiry I did not understand.

"What can you know about diamonds?" he presently demanded. "Nothing but their glitter, and glitter is not all. The gem she wears may be a very tawdry one."

I flushed with humiliation. He was a dealer in gems—that was his business—and the check which he had put upon my enthusiasm certainly made me conscious of my own presumption. Yet I was not disposed to take back my words. I had had a better opportunity than himself for seeing this remarkable jewel, and, with the perversity of a somewhat ruffled mood, I burst forth as soon as the color had subsided from my cheeks:

"No, no! It is glorious, magnificent. I never saw its like. I doubt if you ever have, for all your daily acquaintance with jewels. Its value must be enormous. Who is she? You seem to know her."

It was a direct question, but I received no reply. Mr. Durand's eyes had followed the lady, who had lingered somewhat ostentatiously on the top step, and they did not return to promenading again in the dim alcove. A passing glimpseterior was afforded me as we to retrace our steps in front of a low divan. The lady with the pink velvet she wore protruded the gap made by the half drapings, just as it had done a moment before. But it was impossible her face or who was with her I could see, however, and did figure of a man leaning against a wall at the foot of the steps. I thought this person unknown then I perceived that he was the chief guest of the evening, Englishman of whom I have just spoken.

His expression had altered, looked now both anxious and—particularly anxious and pa

He plunged down the steps with absorbed—so much so that I surprised that no one ventured to preach him. Again I wondered again I asked myself for what he was waiting. For Mr. Durand to leave this lady's presence? I would not believe that. Mr. Durand could not be there still, yet I men make it difficult for a leave them, and, realizing this, not forbear casting a parting behind me as, yielding to my importunities, I turned toward the room. It showed me the man in the act of lifting two coffee from a small table standing in the reception room door. As I plainly betokened white bound with this refreshment, my uneasiness vanished and we take my seat at one of the small tables with which the supper room was furnished for a few minutes at least ear to Mr. Fox's rapid complimentary opinions. Then my attention was

I had not moved nor had my gaze from the scene before me. The ordinary scene of a gay filled supper room—yet I four looking, as if through a mist, even seen develop, at some strange, unusual and remote phantasm, yet distinct enough outlines for me to get a depression of a square of light, the figure of a man in a pose not easily imagined and ly described. It all passed

Since she was a lovely girl, witty and vivacious, and she stood at this very moment at my elbow. In her beauty lay the lure, the natural lure for a man of his gifts and striking personality. If I continued to watch I should soon see his countenance light up under the recognition she could not fail to give him. And I was right. In another instant it did, and with a brightness there was no mistaking. But one feeling common to the human heart lends such warmth, such expressiveness to the features. How handsome it made him look, how distinguished, how everything I was not except—

But what does this mean? He has passed Miss Sperry—passed her with a smile and a friendly word—and is speaking to me, singling me out, offering me his arm. He is smiling, too, not as he smiled on Miss Sperry, but more warmly, with more that is personal in it. I took his arm in a daze. The lights were dimmer than I thought. Nothing was really bright except his smile. It seemed to change the world for me. I forgot that I was plain, forgot that I was small, with nothing to recommend me to the eye or heart, and let myself be drawn away, asking nothing, anticipating nothing, till I found myself alone with him in the fragrant recesses of the conservatory, with only the throbb of music in our ears to link us to the scene we had left.

Why had he brought me here into this fairyland of opalescent lights and intoxicating perfumes? What could he have to say—to show? Ah, in another moment I knew! He had seized my hands, and love, ardent love, came pouring from his lips.

Could it be real? Was I the object of all this feeling, I? If so, then life had changed for me indeed.

Silent from rush of emotion I searched his face to see if this paradise, whose gates I was thus passionately bidden to enter, was indeed a verity or only a dream born of the excitement of the dance and the charm of a scene exceptional in its splendor and picturesqueness even for so luxurious a city as New York.

But it was no mere dream. Truth and earnestness were in his manner, and his words were neither feverish nor forced.

"I love you! I need you!" So I heard, and so he soon made me believe. "You have charmed me from the first. Your tantalizing, trusting, loyal self, like no other, sweeter than any other, has drawn the heart from my breast. I have seen many women, admired many women, but you only have I loved. Will you be my wife?"

I was dazzled, moved beyond anything I could have conceived. I forgot all that I had hitherto said to myself, all that I had endeavored to impress upon my heart when I beheld him approaching, intent, as I believed, in his search for another woman, and, confiding in his honesty, trusting entirely to his faith, I allowed the plans and purposes of years to vanish in the glamour of this new joy and spoke the word which linked us together in a bond which half an hour before I had never dreamed would unite me to any man.

His impassioned "mine, mine!" filled my cup to overflowing. Something of the ecstasy of living entered my soul, which in spite of all I have suffered since recreated the world for me and made all that went before but the prelude to the new life, the new joy.

Oh, I was happy, happy—perhaps too

met all advances.

Yet it was not admiration for her person which he openly displayed. During the whole time he stood there his eyes seldom rose to her face. They lingered mainly—and this was what aroused my curiosity—on the great fan of ostrich plumes which this opulent beauty held against her breast. Was he desirous of seeing the great diamond she thus unconsciously (or was it consciously?) shielded from his gaze? It was possible, for, as I continued to note him, he suddenly bent toward her and as quickly raised himself again with a look which was quite inexplicable to me. The lady had shifted her fan a moment, and his eyes had fallen on the gem.

The next thing I recall with any definiteness was a tete-a-tete conversation which I held with my lover on a certain yellow divan at the end of one of the halls.

To the right of this divan rose a curtained recess, highly suggestive of romance, called "the alcove." As this alcove figures prominently in my story, I will pause here to describe it.

It was originally intended to contain a large group of statuary which our host, Mr. Ramsdell, had ordered from Italy to adorn his new house. He is a man of original ideas in regard to such matters and in this instance had gone so far as to have this end of the house constructed with a special view to an advantageous display of this promised work of art. Fearing the ponderous effect of a pedestal large enough to hold such a considerable group, he had planned to raise it to the level of the eye by having the alcove floor built a few feet higher than the main one. A flight of low, wide steps connected the two, which, following the curve of the wall, added much to the beauty of this portion of the hall.

The group was a failure and was never shipped. But the alcove remained, and, possessing as it did all the advantages of a room in the way of heat and light, had been turned into a miniature retreat of exceptional beauty.

The seclusion it offered extended, or so we were happy to think, to the solitary divan at its base on which Mr. Durand and I were seated. With possibly an undue confidence in the advantage of our position, we were discussing a subject interesting only to ourselves when Mr. Durand interrupted himself to declare: "You are the woman I want, and you only. And I want you soon. When do you think you can marry me? Within a week—if!"

Did my look stop him? I was startled. I had heard no incoherent phrase from him before.

"A week!" I remonstrated. "We take more time than that to fit ourselves for a journey or some transient pleasure. I hardly realize my engagement yet."

"You have not been thinking of it for these last two months as I have."

"No," I replied demurely, forgetting everything else in my delight at this admission.

"Nor are you a nomad among clubs and restaurants."

"No, I have a home."

"Nor do you love me as deeply as I do you."

This I thought open to argument.

"The home you speak of is a luxurious one," he continued. "I cannot offer you its equal. Do you expect me to?"

I was indignant.

"You know that I do not. Shall I know her?"

It was a direct question, but I received no reply. Mr. Durand's eyes had followed the lady, who had lingered somewhat ostentatiously on the top step, and they did not return to me till she had vanished with her companions behind the long plush curtains which partly veiled the entrance. By this time he had forgotten my words, if he had ever heard them, and it was with the forced animation of one whose thoughts are elsewhere that he finally returned to the old plea:

When would I marry him? If he could offer me a home in a month—and he would know by tomorrow if he could do so—would I come to him then? He would not say in a week. That was perhaps too soon. But in a month? Would I not promise to be his in a month?

What I answered I scarcely recall. His eyes had stolen back to the alcove, and mine had followed them. The gentlemen who had accompanied the lady inside were coming out again, but others were advancing to take their places, and soon she was engaged in holding a regular court in this favored retreat.

Why should this interest me? Why should I notice her or look that way at all? Because Mr. Durand did? Possibly. I remember that for all his ardent lovelaking I felt a little piqued that he should divide his attentions in this way. Perhaps I thought that for this evening at least he might have been blind to a mere coquette's fascinations.

I was thus doubly engaged in listening to my lover's words and in watching the various gentlemen who went up and down the steps when a former partner advanced and reminded me that I had promised him a walk. Loath to leave Mr. Durand, yet seeing no way of excusing myself to Mr. Fox, I cast an appealing glance at the former and was greatly chagrined to find him already on his feet.

"Enjoy your dance," he cried. "I have a word to say to Mrs. Fairbrother," and was gone before my new partner had taken me on his arm.

Was Mrs. Fairbrother the lady with the diamond? Yes. As I turned to enter the parlor with my partner I caught a glimpse of Mr. Durand's tall figure just disappearing from the step behind the sage green curtains.

"Who is Mrs. Fairbrother?" I inquired of Mr. Fox at the end of the dance.

Mr. Fox, who is one of society's perennial bedux, knows everybody.

"She is—well, she was Abner Fairbrother's wife. You know Fairbrother, the millionaire who built that curious structure on Eighty-sixth street. At present they are living apart—an amicable understanding, I believe. Her diamond makes her conspicuous. It is one of the most remarkable stones in New York, perhaps in the United States. Have you observed it?"

"Yes—that is, at a distance. Do you think her very handsome?"

"Mrs. Fairbrother? She's called so, but she's not my style." Here he gave me a killing glance. "I admire women of mind and heart. They do not need to wear jewels worth an ordinary man's fortune."

I looked about for an excuse to leave this none too desirable partner.

"Let us go back into the long hall," I urged. "The ceaseless whirl of these dancers is making me dizzy."

With the ease of a gallant man he took me on his arm, and soon we were phantasm, yet distinct enough outlines for me to get a de pression of a square of light showing the figure of a man in a pose not easily imagined and ly described. It all passed instantly, and I sat staring at the opposite me with the feeling who has just seen a vision. Ye immediately I forgot the whole rance in my anxiety as to Mr. Durand's whereabouts. A hubbub of disordered sentences seasoned with horrified cries followed this simple description. Then a gen-

Durand stooped to my ear and whispered:

"We must get out of this. You are not strong enough to stand such ex-

"What, without wraps and in such a

with me, you know."

An expression of annoyance—or was it perplexity?—crossed Mr. Durand's face, and he made a movement as if to leave me.

"I must go," he began, but stopped at my glance of surprise and assumed a different air, one which became him
very much better. "Pardon me, dear,
I will take you to your uncle. This—this dreadful tragedy, interrupting so gay a scene, has quite upset me. I was always sensitive to the sight, the smell,
even to the very mention of the word
blood."

So was I, but not to the point of cowardice. But then I had not just come from an interview with the murdered woman. Her glances, her smiles, the lift of her eyebrows were not fresh memories to me. Some consideration was certainly due him for the shock he must be laboring under. Yet I did not know how to keep back the vital question:

"Who did it? You must have heard some one say."

"I have heard nothing," was his somewhat fierce rejoinder. Then as I made a move: "What! You do not wish to follow the crowd there?"

"I wish to find my uncle, and he is in that crowd."

Mr. Durand said nothing further, and together we passed down the hall. A strange mood pervaded my mind. Instead of wishing to fly a scene which under ordinary conditions would have filled me with utter repugnance, I felt a desire to see and hear everything.
Not from curiosity, such as moved most of the people about me, but because of some strong instinctive feeling I could not understand, as if it were my heart which had been struck and my fate which was trembling in the balance.

We were consequently among the first to hear such further details as were allowed to circulate among the now well nigh frenzied guests. No one knew the perpetrator of the deed, nor did there appear to be any direct evidence calculated to fix his identity.
Indeed the sudden death of this beautiful woman in the midst of festivity might have been looked upon as suicide if the jewel had not been missing from her breast and the instrument of death removed from the wound. So far, the casual search which had been instituted had failed to produce this weapon. But the police would be here
soon and then something would be

to my ear.

But quickly as I turned I could not guess from whom the comment came.
Possibly from a much bedowered, be-jeweled, elderly dame whose eyes were fixed on Mr. Durand's averted face.
If so, she received a defiant look from mine, which I do not believe she forgot in a hurry.

Alas, it was not the only curious, I might say searching, glance I surprised directed against him as we made our way to where I could see my uncle struggling to reach us from a short side hall. The whisper seemed to have gone about that Mr. Durand had been the last one to converse with Mrs.
Fairbrother prior to the tragedy.

In time I had the satisfaction of joining my uncle. He betrayed great relief at the sight of me, and, encouraged by his kindly smile, I introduced Mr. Durand. My conscious air must have produced its impression, for he turned a startled and inquiring look upon my companion, then took me resolutely on his own arm, saying:

"There is likely to be some unpleasantness ahead for all of us. I do not think the police will allow any one to go till that diamond has been looked
for. This is a very serious matter,
dear. So many think the murderer was one of the guests."

"I think so, too," said I. But why
I thought so or why I should say so with such vehemence I do not know even now.

My uncle looked surprised.

"You had better not advance any opinions," he advised. "A lady like yourself should have none on a subject so grieved. I shall never cease regretting bringing you here tonight.
I shall seize on the first opportunity to take you home. At present we are supposed to await the action of our host."

"He cannot keep all these people here long," I ventured.

"No. Most of us will be relieved soon. Had you not better get your wraps so as to be ready to go as soon as he gives the word?"

"I should prefer to have a peep at the people in the drawing room first,"
was my perverse reply. "I don't know
why I want to see them, but I do;
and, uncle, I might as well tell you
now that I engaged myself to Mr.
Durand this evening—the gentleman with me when you first came up."

"You have engaged yourself to—
to this man—to marry him, do you mean?"

I nodded, with a sly look behind to see if Mr. Durand were near enough to hear. He was not, and I allowed my enthusiasm to escape in a few quick words.

"He has chosen me," I said, "the plainest, most uninteresting puss in the whole city." My uncle smiled.
"And I believe he loves me; at all events, I know that I love him."

My uncle sighed, while giving me the most affectionate of glances.

"It's a pity you should have come to this understanding tonight," said he.
"He's an acquaintance of the murdered woman, and it is only right for you to know that you will have to leave him behind when you start for home. All who have been seen entering that alcove this evening will necessarily be detained here till the coroner arrives."

My uncle and I strolled toward the
drawing room and as we did so we passed the library. It held but one

nected with it; why, then, had I caught the attention of the police? Looking about I sought Mr. Durand. He had left me on my uncle's coming up, but had remained, as I supposed, within sight. But at this moment he was nowhere to be seen. Was I afraid on his account? Impossible; yet—

Happily just then the word was passed about that the police had given orders that, with the exception of such as had been requested to remain to answer questions, the guests generally should feel themselves at liberty to depart.

The time had now come to take a stand and I informed my uncle, to his evident chagrin, that I should not leave as long as any excuse could be found for staying.

He said nothing at the time, but as the noise of departing carriages gradually lessened and the great hall and drawing rooms began to wear a look of desertion he at last ventured on this gentle protest:

"You have more pluck, Rita, than I supposed. Do you think it wise to stay on here? Will not people imagine that you have been requested to do so? Look at those waiters hanging about in the different doorways. Run up and put on your wraps. Mr. Durand will come to the house fast enough as soon as he is released. I give you leave to sit up for him if you will. Only let us leave this place before that impertinent little man dares to come around again," he artfully added.

But I stood firm, though somewhat moved by his final suggestion, and being a small tyrant in my way, at least
with him, I carried my point.

Suddenly my anxiety became poignant. A party of men, among whom I saw Mr. Durand, appeared at the end of the hall, led by a small but self important personage whom my uncle immediately pointed out as the detective who had twice come to the door near which I stood. As this man looked up and saw me still there, a look of relief crossed his face, and after a word or two with another stranger of seeming authority he detached himself from the group he had ushered upon the scene and approaching me respectfully enough said with a deprecatory glance at my uncle
whose frown he doubtless understood:

"Miss Van Arsdale, I believe?"

I nodded, too choked to speak.

death removed from the wound. So
far the casual search which had been
instituted had failed to produce this
weapon. But the police would be here
soon and then something would be done.

As to the means of entrance employed by the assassin, there seemed to be but one opinion. The alcove contained a window opening upon a small balcony. By this he had doubtless entered and escaped. The long plush curtains, which during the early part of the evening had remained looped back on either side of the casement, were found at the moment of the crime's discovery closely drawn together. Certainly a suspicious circumstance. However, the question was one easily settled. If any one had approached by the balcony
there would be marks in the snow to show it. Mr. Ramsdell had gone out to see. He would be coming back soon.

"Do you think this a probable explanation of the crime?" I demanded of Mr. Durand at this juncture. "If I remember rightly, this window overlooks the carriage drive. It must therefore be within plain sight of the door through which some 300 guests have passed tonight. How could any one climb to such a height, lift the window and step in without being seen?"

"You forget the awning." He spoke quickly and with unexpected vivacity.
"The awning runs up very near this window and quite shuts it off from the sight of arriving guests. The drivers of departing carriages could see it if they chanced to glance back. But their eyes are usually on their horses in such a crowd. The probabilities are against any of them having looked up." His brow had cleared: a weight seemed removed from his mind. "When I went into the alcove to see Mrs. Fairbrother she was sitting in a chair near this window looking out. I remember the effect of her splendor against the snow
sifting down in a steady stream behind her—the pink velvet, the soft green of the curtains on either side, her bril-
liants and the snow for a background.
Yes, the murderer came in that way.
Her figure would be plain to any one outside, and if she moved and the diamond shone— Don't you see what a probable theory it is? There must be ways by which a desperate man might reach that balcony. I believe!"

How eager he was and with what a look he turned when the word came filtering through the crowd that, though footprints had been found in the snow pointing directly toward the balcony, there was none on the balcony itself, proving, as any one could see, that the attack had not come from without, since no one could enter the alcove by the window without stepping on the balcony.

"Mr. Durand has suspicions of his own," I explained determinedly to myself. "He met some one going in as he stepped out. Shall I ask him to name this person?" No, I did not have the courage, not while his face wore so stern a look and was so resolutely turned away.

The next excitement was a request from Mr. Ramsdell for us all to go into the drawing room. This led to various gries from hysterical lips, such as, "We are going to be searched!" "He believes the thief and murderer to be still in the house!" "Do you see the diamond on me?" "Why don't they confine their suspicions to the favored few who were admitted to the alcove?"

"They will," remarked some one close

My uncle and I strolled toward the
drawing room and as we did so we
passed the library. It held but one occupant, the Englishman. He was seated before a table, and his appearance was such as precluded any attempt at intrusion, even if one had been so disposed. There was a fixity in his gaze and a frown on his powerful forehead which bespoke a mind greatly agitated. It was not for me to read that mind, much as it interested me, and I passed on chatting as if I had not the least desire to stop.

I cannot say how much time elapsed before my uncle touched me on the arm with the remark:

"The police are here in full force. I saw a detective in plain clothes look in here a minute ago. He seemed to have his eye on you. There he is again! What can he want? No, don't turn; he's gone away now."

Frightened as I had never been in all my life, I managed to keep my head up and maintain an indifferent aspect. What, as my uncle said, could a detective want of me? I had nothing to do with the crime; not in the re-motest way could I be said to be con-

UNCLE SAM'S HOUSEKEEPING.

The Significance of Little Things That Help to Oil the Social Wheels—No
Quarter for the Man Who Forgets
His Wife's Birthday.

Dear Elsa—I was so sorry you could not come to New York when the fleet was here, for the sight was well worth seeing. Over a hundred of our battleships, armored cruisers and torpedo boats lined up for miles along the Hudson river, and at night, when the ships were brilliantly lighted, the effect was gorgeous. Dick knew a number of the officers on board the ships, so we were royally entertained during their stay in these waters. I had lots of fun going over one of the ships with a young ensign. He was so terribly afraid that everything would not be in perfect order that he reminded me of a very new young housekeeper receiving her husband's relatives for the first time.

You go down a flight of stairs. Everything is up and down on a ship, just like your grandmother's old house in the country, where no two rooms are on the same level.

"Here's the mess room," said my es-

of his hand in the direction of the Hudson:

"Our method of repairing socks is far superior to the old fashioned way of darning. We require neither machine, thread nor needle. We throw 'em overboard."

"Would you care to see my quarters?" politely inquired my guide after we had inspected the kitchen regions and found them immaculate and up to date in their appointments.

The ensign, stifling the mingled pride and anxiety which always beset young housekeepers, led the way to his apartment with a nonchalant air. After giving a hasty glance around the room as I peered into it and, while preserving an unconcerned face, I caught him giving a surreptitious backward kick to an inquisitive slipper under his bunk and swiftly jamming a sociably inclined handkerchief back into the drawer of a chest.

"I didn't know until yesterday," confessed Mr. Ensign earnestly, "that I was a confirmed old bachelor." (I scarcely think he looks his advanced age of twenty-three.)

"I had asked some girls over for tea, and I told the boy to clean up my quarters. Well, do you know, I went down there after lunch, and such a place! It took another fellow and me a whole hour working frantically just to straighten up—not to clean up at all—just to smooth things over." My word, but the boy was funny!

The ward room would have come next in order for inspection, but time was up—visiting hours were over—so there was a chance only for one peep into the quarter which seemed to be a thoroughly masculine place, its walls lined with pictures. She was there in full force and variety, a la Gibson, a la Harrison Fisher and a la nobody in particular.

But don't you think, Elsa, dear, that in this world the significance of little things is often overlooked? Women, though, don't lose sight of them as much as men do. The housewife, for instance, who wants to make her home attractive spends time and thought upon the smallest details and sees to it that the inside as well as the outside of her glass lamp globes is dusted and that her rugs are even and straight. She knows that a good dinner is one that is good throughout and that cold gravy or stale bread will take the touch of completeness away from an otherwise charming meal.

Nothing is too small to be of some importance, and the man who forgets his wife's birthday or does not stoop to pick up her handkerchief when she drops it is pulling out one by one the tiny pegs which hold together the great structure of their happiness.

My, what a lot of cheap philosophy I am getting out of my system! But the weather has been so "beastly, you know," for the last few days that I'm feeling down on my luck. So write soon and cheer up your doleful chum,

MABEL.

COLONIAL HANGINGS.

Quaint Bed Drapery For Your Old Four Poster.

To many Americans there is no style of furnishing which appeals so irresistibly as the colonial, and especially is this the case in regard to bedrooms, for, while it is a question sometimes as to the advisability of furnishing a modern living room in the quaint fashion that is not always well adjusted to modern needs, the bedroom furnished in colonial style is always desirable and perfectly convenient, as well as most attractive to look upon.

The old crocheted lace canopies which were among the handwork in which our grandmothers excelled are still packed away in the trunks of many an old house, but those with a taste for the antique in furnishing have long since disinterred some of these canopies and put them into use on their four post beds. The art of crocheting these canopies or valances is not a difficult one, and women who are not accustomed to crochet have copied the patterns with great success for use on their four posters. When these valances are used on the four posters a spread crocheted in the same manner is used, both valance and spread having a border of deep points and an edging of cotton fringe, either the ball or a straight fringe. Around the lower part of the bed, to carry out the antique style in detail, there is a box plaited founce of white muslin, or this founce may be gathered. Heavy white linen, such as linen sheets are made of, is also used for this founce.

husband's relatives for the first time. You go down a flight of stairs. Everything is up and down on a ship, just like your grandmother's old house in the country, where no two rooms are on the same level.

"Here's the mess room," said my escort.

"But where are the tables and chairs?" I inquired, looking meanwhile into corners for piled up heaps of furniture.

"Up on the coils," replied Mr. Ensign. And, sure enough, there were the tables on racks against the ceiling, but not a chair in sight.

"Where are the chairs?" I persisted, and the encyclopedic guide explained that the seats were all fastened to the ceiling. They are long benches which fold up like those for the tables. Just think of getting your furniture all out of the way during housecleaning time or when you want to give a dance! And no sharp corners to bump into when you come home in the dark!

Up another flight of stairs, across a sort of bridge effect and down again, and I found myself in the ship's sewing room—a man's sewing room. There sat three seamen, their legs thrashing up and down like mad, stitching away for dear life. "They are the ship's seamstresses, the tailors," explained my escort.

"Is there an attachment for darning socks, or do you do them by hand?" I saucily inquired.

A smile of pitying toleration appeared on the countenance of Mr. Ensign, who replied with a significant flourish

The front of the blouse is almost hidden under the billowy frills of lace which form the pointed jabot. The sleeves are long, with the picturesque lace frills falling over the hand. Very often these blouses of white brocade are devoid of any color. Again, the suggestion of color may be introduced ever so slightly in the way of piping or in the buttons. The yellow of amber is sometimes skillfully used in this manner, with the amber buttons as the finishing touch. The blouse illustrated is a dressy affair of navy blue chiffon over old gold satin.

MAKING THE

THE large profits which should attend pork raising are dissipated in too many cases through disease and neglect. Hog cholera will continue to scourge the country until all farmers learn that the pig is not naturally a dirty animal and that it requires field range and forage crops just as much as the horse and cow do.

Hog pens and yards should be kept clean, changing to fresh ground every year. Such forage crops as rape, artichokes, Canada peas and alfalfa ought to be accessible all summer. Shade and clean water are the next essentials. In addition it is well to give whey or sour milk and light rations of corn, peas or barley. Heavy feeding of grain is only necessary in the last few weeks when fitting for market. Corn silage is an excellent food. A little crushed coal, wood ashes, salt, charcoal and oilmeal aid a pig's digestion and contribute to its general healthfulness.

Young pigs are seriously injured by overfeeding and by wet floors and cold bedding. There should be no haste to feed grain either to a farrowing sow or a young litter. Both before and after farrowing the dam is better off with slops, mash and boiled vegetables, such as carrots, potatoes and beets. When the young things get firmly on their feet the mother may be gradually put back on grain for the purpose of hardening up the flesh a little. Sucking pigs should have gradually increasing rations of bran, shorts and boiled vegetables.

BY A WISE FARMER.

That was a wise remark made by a speaker in a farmers' institute when he said that "good farm judgment consisted largely in understanding principles and their working, and as good an understanding of conditions to know if the principles will apply."

THE DOG ON THE FARM.

Get a Good One and Train Him Properly Is an Excellent Rule.

Every farmer should have a dog. A well trained dog, no one will dispute, is the most companionable of all animals and a labor saver to the farmer, says a correspondent of the Orange Judd Farmer. Systematic instruction should be used in drilling the mind and body of the animal to bring out the intelligence required. A well trained, well treated and good tempered dog is

LITTLE FARM PAY

By C. C. BOWSFIELD

Grown hogs require dipping as soon as the weather is warm and again in midsummer. Once will be sufficient for the youngsters, and this may be about the 1st of August. If cholera has ever been known on the place the land occupied by the hogs should be plowed and used for other purposes for a year or two.

The usual medication for dipping and the remedies commonly sold for cholera are safe and effective if used promptly and thoroughly. Prevention is better than any cure, and the farmer who means business will keep his stock healthy by giving them a clear range, sanitary buildings and suitable food. If cholera exists in the neighborhood or has ever been on a place the serum should be given. In wet weather every owner needs to guard his hogs against pleuropneumonia.

It is best to use full blooded sires in pork production, changing every year, so as to avoid inbreeding. Any of the standard breeds can be recommended. A pure bred Poland China sire crossed with a grade Chester White or Duroc-Jersey dam will give excellent results, but this is merely given as an illustration. There is decided merit in the other distinct types.

A dam should have one litter in the spring and another in the fall. It is a good plan to market the spring pigs when nine or ten months old and weighing about 250 pounds, keeping the fall pigs until they are fifteen to eighteen months old, when they should weigh 350 to 400 pounds. If dams are retained after they become heavy and awkward the offspring must be guarded or they will be crushed to death. It is best to give them a warm nest by themselves, allowing them to suckle four times a day.

ALFALFA IN VERSE.

The popular song of the Illinois farmers' institute runs:

What makes the landscape look so fair?
What blossoms bright perfume the air?
What plant repays the farmer's toil
And will enrich the wornout soil?
Alfalfa!

WASTED FERTILITY.

Failure to Use Liquid Manure Means Throwing Away Money.

The Horticulturist discusses the value of liquid manure. It says:

We believe there is no system of enriching the land for small gardens, with a view to perfection of crops, so truly economical and so available as the use of liquid manure. We occasionally hear of a gardener or an amateur grower of some special crop that has practiced enriching with liquids,

"Fruit-a-lives" Makes Wonderful Cure

N. C. STIRLING, Esq.

GLENCOE, ONT., Aug. 15th, 1911.

"So much has been said and written about "Fruit-a-lives" that it might seem unnecessary for me to add my experience.

But "Fruit-a-lives" were so beneficial to me when I suffered with distressing Dyspepsia, that I feel called upon to inform you of the remarkable and satisfactory results I have had from using them.

Dyspepsia and Indigestion as everyone knows, can give you more uncomfortable hours and days than most common complaints.

"I am glad to be able to say to you that although in the past I suffered excruciating agony with Dyspepsia, I am now in perfect health.

"Fruit-a-lives" accomplished the desired result and I have to thank them for my very favorable and satisfactory state of health"

N. C. STIRLING.

Why don't you try "Fruit-a-lives"? 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-lives Limited, Ottawa.

high cost of living necessitates a scrutiny of the gas bill than before, and the careful housewife uses gas for cooking and purposes as well as a lighting. less it can get out of doors when nature demands it. When the dog is young, say two or three months old, he should be fed in small quantities. Never permit him to eat to his own satisfaction, because the ultimate result will be a very sick and unhappy little puppy. It is well to give him his last meal about two hours before he is shut up for the night.

Cornmeal mixed with water, a very little salt and a handful of finely chopped liver or meat thrown in, the whole baked in a cake and when cold broken in bits and fed to the dog makes a very good supper. A great many people insist on giving their pets bread and milk for the evening meal, but this is not a very desirable diet if the dog is to be shut up in the house all night.

There are a great number of tricks which may be taught a dog, but the farm dog should not necessarily be taught tricks. He should be taught sensible things.

A great many, and I may say nearly 90 per cent of the dog owners of the present day, allow their dogs to run recklessly about through their neighbors' gardens, crops, etc. This is a very injudicious piece of business. It not only brings about a hard feeling, but is absolutely uncalled for.

Untreated Alfalfa Is Best.

The results of five years' tests indicate that for fattening hogs the way to feed alfalfa most satisfactorily is to feed it without grinding or chopping. This method has given faster and cheaper gains than feeding a like amount of chopped or ground alfalfa or a larger percentage of either.—Nebraska Experiment Station.

Deplores the Navy Vote.

Kingston, Dec. 10.—Preaching at Sydenham Street Church, Rev. G. I. Campbell touched on the Borden Navy Bill. He said that while the people of Canada were loyal British subjects, he believed that we should and did deplore such a contribution, in variance as it was to God's will, it's object being the slaughter of mankind.

Shot Big Wild Goose.

Galt, Dec. 10.—A large wild goose shot on the farm of Cameron Scott, near Branchton, measured 7 feet from tip to tip of the wings and weighed twelve pounds.

with a view to perfection of crops, so truly economical and so available as the use of liquid manure. We occasionally hear of a gardener or an amateur grower of some special crop that has practiced enriching with liquids, but it is only occasionally, yet the result of every record is in its favor, and a searching inquiry into extra production of fruit, flower or plant almost invariably gives watering with liquid manure as the cause.

There is on almost every farm a waste of liquids, which usually go into the sewer drain or possibly upon the road, where they are of no avail, but which if saved by being conducted to a tank would enrich the entire garden of vegetables, small fruits, furnish stimulus to the rose and other flower borders and keep the grass plot green and fresh even in the hottest and driest of midsummer. The use of a little plaster occasionally thrown in and around the tank would always keep it sweet and clean.

By the use and practice of liquid manure no delay need ever occur in planting time because of the manure not being on hand or not being in a sufficiently rotted condition, but planting could proceed and the application of manure be made at leisure.

Training Horses' Manes.

When the horse's mane inclines to the wrong side an excellent plan is to make a cover, like the one here shown, to fit closely over the horse's neck. It may be made of heavy muslin or canvas with buttons underneath to fasten it in place. It does not interfere with the bridle or collar. It can be used on the horse as long as it is needed.—Farm and Fireside.

HORSE COLLAR.

Timely Bee Notes.

It is the veriest folly to try to winter over a weak colony, for it is almost sure to perish, and for this and other reasons unite two or more such colonies to give sufficient bees to insure warmth, etc. Just throw them together in one hive, queens and all, and let the bees fight it out themselves as to which queen shall sway the scepter of power.

It is a mooted question as to whether the entrance of the hives should be contracted where bees are to be wintered out of doors. Many experts consider it best to contract the entrances. A shingle or other piece of wood can be used for this purpose. It should be so tacked over the entrance of the hive as to allow the colony an outlet of one to two inches.

He's bound to grow up, and who knows but he'd have to write beauty hints for a woman's magazine to make his living."

Nothing the Matter.

"Why, man, what's the matter with you?"

"Nothing," replied the sufferer patiently as he fell on a sofa and called for air.

"Nothing! There surely is something the matter. You look as though you had been through a battle, a political campaign and a couple of weddings."

"Nothing like that, I assure you."

"Then what is it?"

"Been out helping my wife select a hat, that's all."

The others tiptoed away and left him, but they ordered the waiter to stand near to take his order should he come too.

"I didn't sleep well last night."

"Too bad!"

"Yes; I feel bad today."

"Sick or anything?"

"No; I wasn't sick, but the baby didn't have the colic, the puppy next door got lost, Jones' graphophone was broken, and I kept waking up every few minutes to see what made it so still."

Second Song Recital.

Mrs. Franklyn VanLoven's recital

Songs at the Town Hall on Friday evening last, Dec. 20th, presented this singer in a series of songs noted for their beauty of vocal outline and romantic sentiment. It is not necessary to give the programme in detail. Mrs.
VanLoven started with three brilliant arias from Massenet Gounod and Saint Saens, the last displaying the power and depth of this truly fine voice. Her second group of songs was from Liszt, Wolf, Haile and Richard Strauss. In these lyric selections, singing with calmness, surety
and restraint, she secured effects that surpass mere admiration. Ware's Sunlight Waltz song opened the last group and was most dazzling, followed by songs by Salter, Woodman, Gorring, Thomas and Spross, revealing
the beauty of the higher notes of her voice. This singer combines in almost equal degree the qualities of sweetness, tenderness, elegance and distinction. The splendid audience followed the artist with concentrated attention, greeting her with enthusiastic applause after each number. She sang her programme from memory which added greatly to the enjoyment of it. Miss Helen Van-Loven, the young pianist, gained a strong grip on her audience on Friday evening last displaying much musical temperament and strong artistic qualities. She played the Johann Strauss waltz with a clearness of technique and power impossible to believe, and in the Richard Strauss Traumerei and Silent
Woodland Paths, all from memory, played into the hearts of her hearers
and the generous applause awarded her was genuine appreciation of her gifts. Miss VanLoven's delicately shaded accompaniments furnished a perfect musical background for the different songs on the programme.

The First Annual Two Months Short Course in Agriculture

will be held under the auspices of the Napanee Collegiate Institute.

Jan. 6th to Feb. 28th, 1913

This short course in Agriculture is put on for the benefit of Farmers Sons who cannot attend the Ontario Agricultural College. The work will be made as PRACTICAL as possible, with special emphasis on those branches of Agriculture most important in this county. Lectures will begin at 9.30 a. m. and close at 3.30 p. m., so that boys within driving distance may live at home and attend. All text books will be provided by the Department. This course is intended for boys who have not been able to attend school regularly, as well as for more advanced scholars.
No fees. No age limit. No entrance examination. Every farmer's son in the county should make an effort to attend.
